CM says Sindh pioneered protection laws for women and children

KARACHI: Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah on Tuesday said that Sindh had pioneered rights-based legislation in Pakistan and continued to strengthen its implementation through coordinated efforts with government departments and development partners.

He said this during a meeting, held at CM House, with a delegation of Punjab parliamentarians organised by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA).

According to a press statement issued by the CM House, the meeting focused on women and child protection laws and Sindh's pioneering legislative framework designed to safeguard vulnerable segments of society.

Parliamentarians from Punjab included Ali Gilani, Ahmer Bhattai, Rana Muhammad Arshad, Zulfiqar Ali Shah, Muhammad Awais Dareshak, Shahbaz Ahmad, Sarah Ahmad, Ishrat Ashraf, PDU's Attaullah Awais, Asfa, Sultan Daud, Usama Khawar, PDU, UNFPA deputy representative, and others.

During the meeting, the CM outlined key legislation enacted by the Sindh government, saying that the Sindh Child Protection Authority Act, 2011, established a formal institutional mechanism for the protection and welfare of children in need of special care.

He said that the Sindh Child Marriages Restraint Act, 2013, prohibited and penalised child marriages, particularly to safeguard young girls from early and forced unions.

CM Shah said the Domestic Violence (Prevention and Protection) Act, 2013, protects women, children, and vulnerable persons from all forms of domestic violence, ensuring mechanisms for reporting, protection, and justice.

He said that the Sindh Commission on the Status of Women Act, 2015, established a statutory body to promote women's political, economic, and social rights and to monitor the government's compliance with national and international gender equality commitments.

The CM said that the Women Agricultural Workers Act, 2019, recognised women engaged in agriculture as formal workers entitled to fair wages, decent working conditions, and access to social protection schemes.

He said that the government passed the Sindh Hindu Marriage Act, 2016, which provided a legal framework for marriage registration within the Hindu community, ensuring the protection of family and inheritance rights for minority women.

The meeting concluded with a shared commitment to strengthen inter-provincial collaboration on human rights legislation and to continue partnerships with UNFPA for policy dialogue, technical support, and institutional capacity building. —Staff Reporter

Romanian opera singer wows music lovers

KARACHI: Romanian opera singer Georgiana Costea-Gluga was not known to many Pakistani music lovers before Tuesday evening. But now after her delightful performance on the World Culture Festival stage organised by the Arts Council, she will be often discussed by them, and with respect and admiration in equal measure.

The singer put her vocal skills on display in a masterful fashion. While singing, like opera artists usually do, she hit the higher notes with a great deal of ease and facility. But it was her brilliant use of the lower register that impressed connoisseurs of music enormously.

She is a gifted vocalist who knows how and when to modulate her voice and how effectively to employ linguistic and musical inflections at the right time.

Costea-Gluga's was a nine-piece performance. The first set of three items comprised 'Stars in the Sky' by Romanian composer Nicolai Bretan.

The second one was the operatic version of the Romanian song 'Your Lovely Eye'. And the third was a folk song. The vocalist was accompanied on stage by Usman Anees, a Pakistani concert pianist. He was very good as well. —By Peerzada Salman

Mangroves plantation

KARACHI: University of Karachi (KU) students planted over 2,000 mangrove saplings off the city's coast to mark World Tsunami Awareness Day.

The student-led drive, part of the Mangrove Crew initiative, combined eco-tourism with disaster-awareness activities during a visit to Kaderu Island near Rehri Goth, promoting community-based coastal protection and environmental education.

Over 100 undergraduates from KU's Mass Communication Department took part in the plantation and learning sessions, aimed at restoring mangrove belts that act as Karachi's natural defence against rising seas and tidal surges.— APP ballistic solid propellant missile weapon systems, to grab the interest of the visitors. Plus, there were simulators, drones, armoured vehicles, power solutions, including lithium batteries, drone jammers, solar inverters, etc, which beckoned.

Companies offering armoured vehicles had perfectly normal looking vehicles, which you get to see on the roads all the time, modified for protection with the entire passenger cabin inside area armoured with an armour poly steel. Also, they had very sturdy special tyres with run flat inserts. These tyres with the inserts, made from a German material called Europlast, can carry the car with flat tyres at top speed for an extra 40 to 50 kilometres.

Hall 2 of the exhibition was dedicated entirely to Balochistan. There were stalls showcasing the rich mineral resources from the province. Balochistan has reserves of copper, gold, sulphur, lead, zinc, shale, coal, chromite, etc. The stall set up by Saindak Metals Limited displayed copper extracted from the area and after it had been processed. There were also stalls to tell one about the livestock resources in Balochistan. More about the province included its tourism opportunities and it's already booming blue economy sector.

Shipping and trade also have a big presence at the exhibition. The Karachi Port Trust, the Karachi Port Qasim Authority and Pakistan's deep water container port, Hutchison, also had stalls.

Meanwhile, the International Maritime Conference being held concurrently with PIMEC-25 commenced on Tuesday. Organised under the auspices of Pakistan Navy in collaboration with the Ministry of Maritime Affairs, the conference brings together policymakers, naval professionals, industry leaders, and maritime experts from around the world to discuss issues of global maritime significance. Federal Finance Minister Muhammad Aurangzeb was the chief guest.

Earlier, President (Designate) National Institute of Maritime Affairs, Rear Admiral Javaid Iqbal (R), warmly welcomed the distinguished delegates and participants.

Expelled PTI members of City Council reject current party leadership

By Imran Ayub

KARACHI: City Council members of the Pakistan Tehreek-i-Insaf (PTI), who were expelled by the PTI last week for defying directives from party founder Imran Khan by abstaining from the mayoral elections over two years ago, insisted on Tuesday that they remained loyal to Imran Khan and continued to consider themselves part of the party.

More than that, they accused the current PTI leadership of being "fake office-bearers".

Parliamentary leader of the PTI in the City Council Asad Aman, while addressing a press conference at the Karachi Press Club, claimed that the party currently had no constitutional or organisational structure.

The Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP), he said, had already annulled PTI's intra-party elections before the general elections.

Although fresh intra-party polls were held after the general elections, the ECP had neither approved nor rejected them, he added.

"When there is no constitutional structure in place, who are these fake office-bearers issuing us expulsion notices?" Asad Aman questioned.

He asserted that only Imran Khan, the party's chairman, had the authority to decide their political future.

"Once he is released from jail, we will present our case before him, and whatever he decides will be acceptable to us," he added.

The PTI last week expelled 32 of its City Council members from the party for defying directives issued by party founder Imran Khan by abstaining from the polling process — a move that ultimately paved the way for Barrister Murtaza Wahab to become Karachi's first-ever mayor from the Pakistan Peoples Party.

The PTI described the action as part of its "renewed campaign" to enforce discipline and send a clear message that those who defied Mr Khan's directives had no place in the party.

However, Mr Aman, accompanied by UC Chairman Salman Khan and City Councillor Uzair Ahmed Siddiqui, said that a "Q-League group" had taken control of the PTI, saying that these were the people who had changed multiple parties over the time, and now they were "lecturing us on loyalty".

He said that he and his colleagues remained loyal only to Imran Khan and no other leader.

"For us, Imran Khan is everything in the party," he said.

"We were elected because of Imran Khan, and if he asks us to resign tomorrow, we will do so without a second thought."

Mr Aman said the expelled members still considered themselves genuine workers of the PTI and dismissed the authority of the current leadership.

"Those sitting in power today are fake office-bearers who do not represent the vision of our founder," he remarked, adding that their allegiance to the PTI was tied solely to Imran Khan's leadership and ideology.
